

THE DESCENDANTS OF ALEXANDER HARVEY

THE HARVEY NAME

The Harvey name is derived from two Saxon words meaning an army fort and evidently had its origin in England prior to the Norman Conquest. It is one of the oldest among English family names and appears in the Domesday Book and other Saxon and Norman annals.

"Harvey (Saxon) from 'Here', an army, and 'Wic', a fort."

"Well distributed over England south of a line drawn from Hull to Chester. North of that line its frequency abruptly ceases. Is best represented in Essex, Hants and Kent.

This name in the reign of Henry I took the form of Harvey and Hervi and was found in London and Cambridgeshire. (Hundred Rolls). Herve is an ancient Norman personal name. Harvey is also found in many parts of Scotland.

THE HARVEY FAMILY

The Harveys came early to America, and settled in practically all parts of the country then open to colonization. When the Census of 1790 was taken, families of that name were returned from every state, comprising a total of 356 families with an aggregate of 1,904 persons. The immigration of families of the name was evidently from both England and Scotland, and the Harvey name appears in practically all Colonial and Revolutionary records.

Four Harvey genealogies are on file in the Library of Congress as follows: "The Harvey Book" by Oscar James Harvey, published in 1899; "Rev. Erastus Harvey and His Descendants" by Howard H. Harvey published in 1912; "The Ancestry of Col. John Harvey" by John Harvey Treat, published in 1907; and "The Descendants of Elisha Harvey" by Rev. John William Kappenberger, published in 1914.

It has been impossible to connect the Missouri branch of the family with any of those recorded in these genealogies, and unless the official records of the Virginia counties in which the family is known to have lived supply missing data it is improbable that the family history can be traced beyond Alexander Harvey the progenitor of the Missouri Branch.

The county histories of Norfolk County, Orange County, Albemarle County and Amherst County, while supplying a wealth of data relative to various Harvey families, make no mention of any from whom the Missouri family can be traced. One of the descendants in Missouri (V-38) is said to have made an exhaustive and costly investigation through professional genealogists, but was unable to establish Revolutionary service or trace the line back to the emigrant Harvey.

The Census of 1790 returns 39 Harvey families for the State of Virginia as follows:

(Each name given is the head of a separate family living in the state in 1790. The figures give the page of the census book and are followed by the name of the county from which the family was returned. As the census records for Virginia were destroyed when the British burned the Capitol at Washington in 1814, the census records for Virginia are incomplete and the absence of a name is not conclusive evidence that such a family was not living in any particular county or in the state in 1790.)

This wide distribution of the family in Virginia at so early a date and a similar distribution of the family through the other colonies indicates a general immigration for many years prior to 1790 and from many sources and renders practically impossible the recognition of lines of descent unless supported by family records or genealogies or the will and probate records of the counties to which the branch of the family can be authentically traced.

The following citations from a history of Orange County, Virginia may relate to men connected with early generations of the present Missouri family, but there is no evidence whatever to support such connection:

"Thomas Harvey and Joseph Harvey were living in Orange County, Virginia in 1782. Joseph Harvey enlisted in the Revolutionary Army and was enrolled in the company of Captain Francis Taylor from January 29, 1776 to March 17 of the same year. William Harvey also is enrolled in the company of Captain William Taylor."

Date of death unknown

2-(Daughter)Harvey--Birth unknown---Death unknown
3-(Son) Harvey-----Birth unknown---Death unknown
4-Thomas Harvey-----Birth unknown---Death unknown
5-Alexander Harvey--Birth unknown---Death unknown

No definite record of this Harvey remains, either written or traditional. Mrs. Lahr (V-50) thinks he lived in England and that three of his sons, among them his son Alexander, emigrated to America and settled in Virginia, but does not vouch for the data as authentic. Mr. F. F. Harvey (IV-18) says there were three sons, Alexander, Thomas and a son whose name he has forgotten, and a daughter who married a Mr. Snow. No further information is available.

II-2.

(Daughter) Harvey----- (Unknown) Snow.
(Marriage date unknown) Birth unknown
Death unknown

This daughter was married in Virginia according to Mr. F.F. Harvey (IV-18) and spent her entire life there. She was married to a Mr. Snow but nothing further is known of her or her family.

II-3.

(Son) Harvey-----Unmarried.

This son is said by Mr. F. F. Harvey (IV-18) to have died unmarried in Virginia. No further information.

II-4.

Thomas Harvey-----Unknown

Thomas Harvey served in the Revolutionary army in a company of Virginia Militia, and was killed in battle, according to Mr. F. F. Harvey (IV-18). It is possible that this is the Thomas Harvey mentioned as living in Orange County in 1782 in Scott's History of Orange County, Virginia, although hardly probable. No information as to whether he was married.

6-Francis Harvey-----May 2, 1790-----May 25, 1860
7-Augustin Harvey-----Jan 29, 1797-----Oct 2, 1862

Nothing is known of Alexander Harvey except his name and that he was living in Virginia at the time of the birth of his son Francis. The Census of Virginia for 1790, the year of the birth of that son, gives only one Alexander Harvey as the head of a family, and he is returned from Norfolk County, one of the coast counties and entirely across the state from Albemarle, Nelson and Orange Counties in which the family is known to have been living thirty years later. However, as the census records for Virginia were burned in 1814 by the British, and the remaining records for that state are very incomplete this omission is not conclusive.

Note; As Norfolk County is on Hampton Roads, one of the great harbors of the Atlantic coast and a port of entry to emigrants arriving in Virginia, it is possible that this is a record of the Alexander Harvey (II-5) above and indicates him as the emigrant and fixes approximately the date of the arrival of the family in America. This would corroborate the version of Mrs. Lahr (II-50) that Alexander was one of three brothers who came to America together, but there is no documentary evidence on which to base such a conclusion.

Francis Harvey was born in Orange County, Virginia, in 1790.

(Head stone in family cemetery). He was married to Melinda Dameron about the year 1820 and either was living in Nelson County, Virginia at the time or moved there soon after, as he was living in Nelson County in 1823 at the time of the birth of his son Nicholas. (Census return for Nicholas Harvey for 1850 and History of Lincoln County, p. 549). As Orange County borders on the northern edge of Albemarle County, the county in which his wife was born, and Nelson County borders on the southern edge of Albemarle, it may be inferred that he was born, reared and married in what in pioneer times amounted to the same neighborhood.

About the time of his marriage Francis assumed the management of a large farm owned by a Judge Reeves, an absentee landlord. He continued as superintendent of the Reeves plantation for nine years at an annual salary of $350, competent salary in those days of limited specie. The remarkable thrift and management of his wife made his household self supporting and he was able each year to put out the $350 at 12% compound interest. When he decided to resign the management of the farm Mr. Reeves offered him an increase of $100 a year if he would sign a contract for two years but the lure of free land in the West towards which the tide of emigration was already setting strongly from Virginia and the Carolinas, decided him and he declined Mr. Reeves' generous offer. Accompanied by one companion, a friend by the name of Emanuel Poor, he made a prospecting trip from Virginia to Missouri on horseback in 1829, and bought a tract of land in Lincoln County, on Bryant's Creek about three miles due north of New Hope, then the thriving metropolis of Eastern Lincoln. He returned to Virginia and in 1831 (must have been later as Thomas Alexander (13) was born in Virginia) came with his family to establish here a home destined to become one of the noted homes in that section.

The house erected by his slaves on a knoll jutting out into the bottom lands which were the source of his wealth still stands. The frame is constructed of sawn oak fastened together with wooden pins and it was said at the time it was constructed that it could have been rolled about like a bird cage without breaking it apart, and the masonry foundation laid without mortar is still beautifully symmetrical after more than a hundred years. Here was brought the first carriage, the first piano and the first sewing machine seen in Lincoln County. Francis was both prosperous and progressive and brought with him the old Virginia customs of social intercourse and hospitality. The Harvey homestead and the large family of boys and girls with the numerous slaves that swarmed about the servants quarters, the rich abundance supplied by its fertile bottom fields and upland pastures, and its location on the principal road to the north, then the nearest road paralleling the Mississippi traversable at all seasons, made it one of the social centers of two counties. Two of the slaves, Campbell and Eli, were very proficient on the "fiddle", and in the evening when the young people had gathered for a frolic with Campbell and Eli in attendance it was not an unusual occurrence for the clock to be surreptitiously turned back prolonging the festivities until a forbidden hour in the evening when it would be again turned forward to conform to sunrise in the morning.

The first six children were born in Virginia and the eldest was but nine years old at the time of their removal to Missouri. There were fifteen children in all and Francis took great care in their training. Like the typical citizen of the Old Dominion, Francis was a staunch advocate of education. No public school was available in the neighborhood, so while the children were small he secured a teacher and maintained a school at his home to which came many children of his neighborhood as well as his own. When the children were older he took the entire family to spend the winters near good schools. The winters of 1854 and 1855 were spent in Louisiana, Missouri, and the winters of 1856 and 1857, in Troy, in both of which excellent schools flourished at that time. All of the children were given opportunities for advanced study. Littlepage attended the University of Virginia. Thomas and Floyd were students at Missouri University from which the latter was graduated as a civil engineer. Columbus was for two years at the United States Military Academy at West Point. Caroline and Elizabeth were for several years at Lindenwood College at Saint Charles. Susannah attended school in Clarksville, Missouri and Pittsfield, Illinois, both noted schools of that day, and St. Louis where she took dancing from Prof. Zorpee, an eminent educator. Lucy and Virginia were for a number of terms at Monticello College at Godfrey, Illinois and at Pittsfield, Illinois and Saint Louis, Missouri. Margaret Elnora was a student in Saint Louis and Little Rock, Arkansas. Melinda Edith was a student at Visitation Convent, Saint Charles.

Francis was considered a man of exceptional business ability. At a time when ten thousand dollars was looked upon as a competency in his locality, and assessments were systematically low, the Census of 1850 assessed his property as, realty $24,800; personality $16,500; total $41,300. At the time of his death ten years later, after having given each of his children a farm or its equivalent, he owned 700 acres of land, many slaves, and other property in proportion.

Francis was a devout member of the Baptist Church and a lifelong Democrat. In physique he was more than six feet tall, of fine proportion and commanding presence. It is related that he had his boots blacked every day and that he wore a tall silk hat at all times. He is buried beside his wife in a family cemetery which he established on a knoll just across the public road from his home. Before his death he had enclosed the cemetery with a stone wall planned to stand for all time and to be a landmark for future years. But within fifty years after his death the busy town of New Hope had become a deserted village, and interstate highways had diverted the tide of traffic which flowed past his door leaving the once populous road a mere lane. The great establishment has disappeared; the farm has been cut into small holdings, and the cemetery in which he lies is remote and desolate with fallen walls and broken gravestones. Once one of the noted and influential men of his community his name has been forgotten save by those few loyal descendants whose affectionate pride in his character and achievements preserves for their children the memory of their pioneer forefathers.

Francis Harvey was a friend and supporter of Senator Thomas Hart Benton and Benton would spend the night at the Harvey home when passing through. At the political meetings he always invited Francis to sit with the dignitaries on the platform and in the Augustin Harvey was born in Virginia and followed his brother Francis to Missouri where he secured land near the present church of Star Hope. He was twice married, the last time after he had reached the age of 60. Buried in family cemetery in orchard adjoining his yard.

Mildred Palmer, daughter of John William Palmer and Louisa Riddle, was born in Fauquier County, Virginia, and was a sister of Cordelia Palmer who married Martin Joseph Mays, see #4 Mays Book, biographical record of St. Charles and Warren Co. p. 338. Her grandfather served in the War of 1812 and her great grandfather in the American Revolution.

Matilda Halley was born in Bedford County, Virginia and was brought by her parents to Missouri when six months old. Baptist. Subsequently married to Frederick Burger April 26, 1865 to whom were born five children as follows:

Nicholas Alexander Harvey was born in Nelson County, Virginia and was but eight years old at the time of his father's migration to Missouri. He was a Mason, an Odd Fellow and a member of the Democratic Party. Immediately after his marriage in Lincoln County, Missouri, in 1854, he moved to the State of Wisconsin where he was engaged in the mercantile business until 1860 when he returned to Missouri and continued in business in New Hope until 1868 when he transferred his business to Cap-au-Gris and was in business there until 1873. After the death of his wife he lived with his sister Susan Dameron Dawson and after her death with his niece Mrs. Ida Dawson Lahr.

Amy Jane Reid, daughter of James Reid (born in Virginia, August 4, 1799, died in Missouri, February 1, 1871) and Lucy Robinson (born in Kentucky, July 25, 1808, died in Missouri, April 31, 1886) was born in Shelby County, Kentucky. Her parents came to Missouri while she was young and spent the remainder of their lives in Lincoln County. Both were members of the Associate Reform Presbyterian Church and her father was a Democrat and was for a number of years County Surveyor of Lincoln County. (History of Lincoln County, Missouri by Dr. Mudd, published in 1886, P.549.)

Her father James Reid was the son of Major Alexander Reid (born in Scotland, April 28, 1766, emigrated to South Carolina, thence to Virginia, later to Kentucky and finally to Missouri, where he died in 1830, was the first buried in Reid Cemetery, and Jane Shannon (Born April 22, 1769, died in Missouri in 1852).

Her mother Lucy Robinson was the daughter of George Robinson (Born Oct. 12, 1771 in Virginia of Scotch descent and removed to Kentucky where he was living at the time of his death in 1861) and Amy Newland of whom little is known. Susan Dameron Harvey was born in Nelson County, Virginia, and was but two years old when her father moved to Missouri in 1831. Educated in the schools of Louisiana, St. Louis and Troy.

James Lewis Dawson's grandfather, James Watt owned a home around which Appomatox River curved.

She was a woman of unusual beauty and of lovable disposition. Quiet, reserved, tactful, and with high ideals, she exerted through a busy but uneventful life an influence reflected in the life and character of every descendant, and at every hearth kindled from her own.

At her marriage her father gave her a tract of land on Bryant's Creek adjoining what was then known as the New Hope Ford. Because of its lofty elevation and beautiful view the home was called "Top Lofty" and printed invitations are still preserved requesting the presence of fortunate recipients at social functions at Top Lofty in the early seventies.

James Lewis Dawson, son of Ludwell Lee Dawson and Jane Melvina Watt, was born in Amherst County, Virginia and came to Missouri with his guardian in 1844. He was a Mason, a Democrat and a Baptist and his home was considered headquarters for the ministers officiating at the Ebenezer Baptist Church of which he was Clerk and Deacon from the time of its founding. Long a prominent member of Salt River Association, he was the first Chairman of the Executive Board of Cuivre Association and presided over its meetings until his death. Oak Ridge Cemetery, Lincoln County, Missouri. (History of Lincoln County by Dr. Mudd, published 1888, page 524.)

Littlepage Dameron Harvey-----Unmarried.

Littlepage Dameron Harvey was born in Virginia and brought to Missouri. He was graduated from the Law Department of the University of Virginia and immediately made a prospecting trip to California with the gold seekers. (Census of 1850). On his return he located at Arkadelphia, Clark County, Arkansas for the practice of his profession. He was successful from the first and was shortly elected to the circuit bench where he was serving at the outbreak of the Civil War. He was among the first to volunteer and joined the army of the Confederacy taking with him as his bodyguard the negro boy given him by his father and kept as an office boy. His regiment bore the brunt of Grant's attack at Shiloh on the afternoon of April 6, 1862 and held position through such desperate fighting that at nightfall only 121 men remained, many of whom were wounded. Orders were given to replace the shattered regiment with fresh troops but the men by a unanimous vote petitioned to remain and went into action at early dawn the morning of April 7th. Out of Littlepage's company of 147 men only 17 survived. The faithful negro servant searched among the piled up heaps of the slain until he found his master and carried him to the edge of the field and after removing his watch and papers buried him in a separate grave where he sleeps today. The watch, a gold hunting cased time piece was forwarded to the family by Confederate officers who retained the slave. He was later drowned in crossing a swollen stream. Littlepage possessed a well equipped office, a good law library and is said to have owned several hundred acres of Arkansas land, but in the turmoil and uncertainty attending and following the war the family did not investigate and nothing was ever heard from his property.

NOTE: Judge James Linahan, of Troy, who participated in the battle under Buell gives the following account of the battle: Albert Sidney Johnston with consummate generalship planned to defeat the Union armies by piecemeal. He attacked Grant who had 25,000 men while he was separated from Buell by the Mississippi River, and drove him back five miles to the river bank and at four o'clock in the afternoon had him badly beaten and huddled in a narrow valley, while Johnston held hills around. The death of Johnston early in afternoon saved Grant's command from annihilation and capture. That night Buell crossed the river with his division and reenforced Grant and next day with his fresh troops overwhelmed the Confederates and drove them back, but could not capture or break them.

Thomas Alexander Harvey was the last child born in Amherst County, Virginia.

On the way to Missouri Thomas was taken violently ill and apparently died and was laid out on a trunk. Application was made to the owner of the farm on which the cavalcade was camped for permission for burial. The wife of the owner came down to offer consolation. She had herself recently lost a child of the same age and on seeing Thomas suddenly caught the child to her bosom crying: "Oh my baby, my darling baby". When she laid the child down a flutter of it's eyelids was noted. Restoratives were applied and the child revived and recovered.

He attended school at Troy and Louisiana and was later a student at Missouri University. When gold was discovered in California he joined the tide of adventurous spirits seeking the Eldorado of the West and made the trip overland to the Pacific but returned after a short stay and was for many years engaged with his brother Floyd in the cattle business. Under their shrewd management both accumulated independent means and after his second marriage Thomas moved to Eureka Springs where he resided until his death.

~~Buried~~, Clarksville Cemetery, Pike County, Missouri.

Eliza Wheeler, daughter of Judge Wheeler, sister of Dr. Charles Wheeler, was born in Lincoln County, Missouri. She was a daughter of Charles Wheeler, a graduate of Dartmouth and sister of Mrs. Lou East Carter and Judge Wheeler of Troy. She had no children and is buried in the Troy Cemetery. Thomas Alexander Harvey was the second time married at Keokuk, Iowa, by Rev. John Burgess to Cynthia Ann Omohundro, daughter of Spottswood James Omohundro and Sarah Elizabeth Hutcherson and the widow of John W. Guy. She was born in Amherst County, Virginia, near Lynchburg. She ~~is a~~ sister of W.W. Omohundro and ~~was the first time married to John W. Guy.~~

Lucy Ann Harvey was the first child born in Missouri. She died at the age of nineteen and is buried in the family cemetery at Locust Grove. Attended Monticello College at Godfrey, Illinois and contracted typhoid at school and died.
