

THE KEMPER BOOK

BY
Clarence Cannon
(1957)

The data in this manuscript, down to and including the fifth generation, is taken from "The Genealogy of the Kemper Family in the United States" written by Willis Miller Kemper and Garry Linn Wright, and published in 1899 by Geo. K. Hazlitt & Company, of 373 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

Dear Cousin:

Am enclosing your copy of family book.

After you have had opportunity to read it shall be glad if you will let us know in accompanying envelope of any errors or omissions which you find so that they may be corrected in the revised edition.

Shall also appreciate it if you will notify from time to time of subsequent births, deaths or marriages in your branch of the line.

Regret that no further copies of the book are available for general distribution as only enough were printed to supply those whose post office address we had.

The farmers of Iowa have doubtless spent one hundred times as much energy on keeping the pedigrees of their live stock straight as the pedigrees of their own families. There has been a tendency for many of us to think that under our democratic system of government there is a feeling of false pride involved in any effort to keep up the family history. And of course there has been a lot of foolish energy expended by some people in an effort to become linked up with such organizations as the Daughters of the Revolution and the Colonial Dames.

Family histories, properly kept, mean a lot even to those members of the family who pretend to despise such things. We are talking now about a family record such as almost anyone can start. The first thing to do is to put down the names of the father and mother, together with the dates and places of the birth and marriage, and the names of the children. Then go back and see if you can do the same thing for each of the four grandparents. In addition, secure a brief history of the life of each, the different places where they lived, the occupation of the men, etc. In many cases, it will also be possible to list at least a few of the eight great-grandparents. There is not much reason in going back of this. In every case, so far as possible, find out a little something about the physical and mental characteristics. Incidentally, this may tell you a little something about the diseases and weaknesses to which the family is peculiarly susceptible.

Usually there is no financial gain whatsoever in this kind of thing, altho occasionally there are families of people who keep records of this sort who find themselves in line for bequests which they would not otherwise have secured. The really important results are not financial at all. The children become better acquainted with the people from whom they sprang, and thus become possessed of a feeling of responsibility and a more accurate idea as to their place in the world, than would otherwise be possible.

In doing this kind of work, it is important to get at it as soon as possible, for the reason that the members of the family who can furnish the best information are usually well along in years, and when they die, the information they can furnish is often totally lost. From a purely cultural point of view, we do not know of any way in which time can be more profitably spent during winter evenings than working up a family book of this sort. It may involve considerable letter writing to distant members of the family, but that should be worth while even tho there is no such thing as a family book involved. While we believe that by far the greatest emphasis should be laid on getting complete information concerning the parents, grandparents, and possibly great-grandparents, it is occasionally interesting to those who are historically minded to follow the thing back further, and in that case, those of our readers who are interested in this sort of thing will be glad to know that in the Historical Library, at Des Moines, there is one of the best collections of genealogical reference works to be found anywhere in the United States.

THE KEMPER NAME

The word kemper can be traced far back among the dialects of the Germanic people. The German word kemp or camp, perhaps akin to the Latin campus, means a field, a place where an army is encamped. The old German verb kempen means to contend, to fight. A "Kemper" was one who contended, a fighter, a warrior.

THE KEMPER FAMILY

The first known of the family is that it was living about the year 1650 in the little German village called Musen about fifteen miles northeast of the city of Siegen, in the then principality of Nassau-Siegen, the present Prussian province of Westphalia.

All knowledge of the family in these early times has been obtained from the records of the little Reformed Church in that village. The earlier records of the church were destroyed during the Thirty Years War which ended with the Treaty of Westphalia in 1648.

John Kemper was the emigrant. He was born at Musen, Germany, and, following his father's profession, was a skilled mechanic. This fact brought about his emigration to America. Governor Alexander Spotswood discovered evidence of iron ore in the "districts towards the Blue Ridge", and was instrumental in securing "skilled miners out of Germany" to open mines there, as he relates in his letters. A colony was assembled largely from the neighborhood of Siegen, and started for America in the late summer or fall of 1713. They remained in London until the spring of 1714 when they embarked for America, and by July 21, 1714, were safely established in a fort on the Virginia frontier. The new settlement comprised fourteen dwellings, including Governor Spotswood's mansion, the parsonage and a residence for each of the twelve German families, one of which was that of John Kemper. It was named Germanna and was situated in Essex County in the extreme northeastern corner of what is now Orange County, Virginia. Here was established the first German settlement in Virginia; here Saint George's parish was to be formed; here the first iron furnace in America was built; here the first pig iron was made; here the first German Reformed Congregation in the United States was organized; and from this place the famous expedition of "The Knights of the Golden Horseshoe" set out on its historic and romantic quest.

About 1720 the growing colony divided and the twelve original families went north about twenty miles into the Northern Neck and settled in Stafford County where they founded a new settlement called Germantown, near the present post office of Midland, Virginia in Fauquier County, and devoted their attention to agriculture. John Marshall, the third Chief Justice of the United States was born there, September 24, 1755, and three generations of the Missouri branch of the family here tilled the soil in the eighteenth century.

John Kemper was evidently a man of some ability. His handwriting shows him to have been a man of at least rudimentary education, and immediately after his settlement in the new district he set up a forge and invented and made the first shovel plough.

John Kemper II was born at Germantown and seems to have resided there during his entire life. His wife, Ann Weaver, was the daughter of Jacob Weaver, one of the original German immigrants in Governor Spottswood's colony of iron workers. No further information.

According to Willis M. Kemper, author of the Kemper Genealogy, Moses Kemper #72 served in the Revolutionary War and is the cousin mentioned as dying on the way home by Benjamin Morgan #55, who says in his declaration for a pension, on file in the Pension Bureau at Washington, D.C.: "I started home in company with some others of the Fauquier and Culpeper Militia, two of which, a brother and a cousin german, died on the way home."

If this "cousin german" was Moses Kemper, as seems certain according to the letter of Willis M. Kemper below, then his service was no doubt identical with that of Benjamin which is briefly as follows:

Substituted for John Fishback and served in 1781 under Captain Hank Reed and Colonel Pendleton. Served in the same company with Frederick Fishback, a brother of John Fishback. Fauquier County, Virginia was my native county. I was discharged at the end of my term.

Later I again served for Frederick Kemper (Evidently #51) who was a brother of Charles Kemper who was Surveyor of Fauquier County from 1799. Served under Colonel Elia Edwards, Captain William Jennings, Lieutenant Edward Fall, Orderly Sergeant Charles Kemper.

We marched to Richmond and there joined General Lafayette with the regulars and General Muhlenberg with the militia. We were captured on May 23 and put on board the Ship Appollyon and were carried to Portsmouth. We endured great hardship and privation but were released on August 15 and "I started home in company with some others of the Fauquier and Culpeper Militia, two of which, a brother and a cousin german, died on the way home."

The Adjutant General at Washington reports: "The name of Moses Kemper has not been found on the rolls, on file in this Department, of any organization of Virginia or Continental troops in service in the War of the Revolution. However, the collection of records of that war in this Department is far from complete, and the absence therefore of any name is by no means conclusive evidence that the person who bore the name did not serve in the Revolutionary Army." March 9, 1914.

William M. Kemper in the appended letter says that Moses Kemper and his cousin, John Button #61, were on the way home and Moses took the smallpox; that Jacob nevertheless tended him to the last, and that Moses recommended his wife and little daughter to the care of Jacob, who took such good care of the widow that he married her August 5, 1782, as the records of Fauquier County, Virginia indicate.

The wife in question was Sarah Morgan, whose father and five or six brothers were in the Revolutionary Army, a noted Revolutionary family.

A letter of inquiry addressed to the Adjutant General asking for any record of the service of James Morgan in the Revolutionary War elicited the following reply:

"March 9, 1914.

My dear Sir:

Referring to your letter of the 6th instant, in which you request the Revolutionary record of James Morgan, said to have served in the Fauquier County Militia from Virginia, I have the honor to inform you as follows:

The record of this office show that one James Morgan, rank no. stated, served in Captain Alexander Parker's Company, 2nd Virginia Regiment, Revolutionary War. His name appears on a list, dated September 9, 1778, of the members of the company, which shows in his case, time in service, 11 months, and under head of casualties, "On command" (detached duty). Neither the date of his enlistment nor the date of the termination of his service has been found of record.

The records also show that one James Morgan served as a soldier of the Virginia Infantry, Revolutionary War. His name appears on a list of soldiers of the Virginia Line who received certificates for the balance of their full pay, which list shows in his case as follows: "Day when, June 19, 1783: Sum L 89-9-0,"

The records further show that one James Morgan served as a private in Captain Wood Jones' Company, 2nd Virginia Regiment of Foot, commanded by Alexander Spotswood, Esq. His name appears on a muster roll dated June 4, 1777, which shows that he enlisted for three years, and it last appears without remark on the company roll for November 1779.

The records further show that one James Morgan served as a private in Captain William Campbell's Company, 1st Virginia State Militia, Revolutionary War. His name appears without remark only on a pay roll for December, 1779, and January, February, March and April, 1780, of all monies received and paid by Lieutenant Charles Russell, Paymaster, to the 1st Virginia State Regiment. Nothing further relative to him has been found of record.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) Geo. Andrews
The Adjutant General.

Martin Kemper was living in Culpeper County, Virginia in the year 1832, and he and his wife, Rosanna that year executed a deed to land in Culpeper County which is recorded in Book "ZZ" at page 462, of the Records of Culpeper County, Virginia. Whether he was born at Germantown in Fauquier County or in Culpeper County does not appear. As the two counties adjoin it is at most a matter of only a few miles.

He married his first cousin, the daughter of his Uncle Moses Kemper, who seems to have been an only child. Both of them are buried in the Kemper Burying Ground lying about a mile due east of New Hope and about fifty yards northwest of the site of the house which he built when he first came to Missouri, and in which he lived until his death. Its site is still marked by the ruins of the old limestone chimneys. The cemetery was located, after the custom of the times, in what was then his orchard.

Soon after the Revolution, the families in and about German-town began to disintegrate and one by one joined the tide of emigration flowing towards the West. In 1832 Raleigh Mayes, a son-in-law of Martin, removed to Missouri, and in 1835 Martin followed him, the women riding horseback with the children behind them and the household effects in a covered wagon. The journey was made overland direct from Culpeper County, Virginia to Lincoln County, Missouri.

They crossed the Mississippi River at Saint Louis, then a small French settlement fortified against the Indians by sharpened stakes driven into the ground, and with public lands open to pre-emption all about. Land now in the most densely populated districts of the city could have been bought for $1.25 an acre. The first night in Lincoln County the family camped at the Old Fort Spring on the road between Troy and Auburn and the next day reached the home of his daughter, Emily Mayes. Martin prospecting for a home located a spring in a small ravine running into Lost Creek lying between the creek and the New Hope-Falmouth Road, a mile or two west of his son-in-law's farm. Over this spring he built his spring-house, the indispensable adjunct of every pioneer home. A short distance to the east, on a gentle slope protected from the north winds by a thickly wooded hill, he built his log house with huge stone fireplace. To this hospitable home came many Virginians seeking a home in the far West and stayed until they could locate a claim and build a home for themselves. Mrs. Robert (Fanny) Sanders, mother of W. S. Sanders, whose grandfather came from Virginia to settle in Missouri, relates that the family came first to "Uncle Martin Kemper's" and remained there as his guest for several weeks while locating a "claim" and that his house was noted both in Virginia and Missouri for the welcome extended to the wayfaring emigrant seeking a new home in the western Caanan.

WILL OF MARTIN KEMPER: from Troy Free Press, Aug. 13, 1937

"Martin Kemper had 80 acres, E $\frac{1}{2}$ S.E. Survey No. 36, Township 51, Range 1 East, valued at \$350; 6 slaves valued at \$2,300; 3 horses at \$90, and 9 cattle valued at \$100.

(The above shows that the land only averaged $4.35 per acre, the slaves about $386, the horses at about $30 and the cattle at a little over $11.)

--Copied from the Assessor's Book for the year 1836 in the vault of the County Clerk in the Courthouse at Troy, Mo."

Note: Assessors at that time were accustomed to count and appraise at about one-third.

(Book 2, page 29, Will Records of Lincoln County, Missouri)

Matilda Kemper

Known in the family as "Tilda". She lived to an advanced age and was never married. After the death of her parents she lived with her nephew, Alexander Dudley Benear until her death. She is buried in the family cemetery on her father's farm. At her mother's death she inherited the family Bible, containing a record of the family statistics, including dates and notations of the trip from Virginia to Missouri. Upon her death the Bible passed to her nephew Alexander Dudley Benear, and at his death it went to his daughter Lucy Wheatley. Unfortunately this venerable heirloom was destroyed when the Wheatley house was burned in 1916, without the record having been copied.

Raleigh Mayes, the son of Henry Mayes and Mary Palmer, was born at Norfolk, Virginia and was married there. He was the first of either family to come to Missouri, and was followed soon after by both his father and his father-in-law. He reached Missouri with his bride in 1832, having made the trip on horseback, and was among the first to settle along the limestone bluffs of eastern Lincoln, then practically a virgin wilderness. He purchased a small tract of land from a settler who had pre-empted it from the government shortly before. (It is possible that this may have been a part of one of the numerous French grants which are found in Lincoln and Saint Charles Counties. Reference to the deed books of the two counties would show this. See abstract of Louis Mayes farm for this data.) At the time of his settlement the Indians were numerous and their camps were found all along the bluffs. Their teepees were erected on the bluffs in order to escape the annual overflows of the Father of Waters and close enough to give access to the river bottoms at that time teeming with game and fish. The mounds in the present orchard of the Jacob Ellis place, now owned by McDonald which was a part of the Raleigh Mayes tract of land, mark the site of an Indian Village and the remains of fallen lodges which members of the family now living (1913) remember having seen. The whoops and calls of the Indians were frequently heard in the forest about the cabins of the early settlers, and in the absence of the men of the family the children were frequently kept in the house, and the doors were barred. Arrow heads and other Indian relics are still found in profusion over this and adjoining tracts of land. Game abounded in profusion. The second morning after making camp Raleigh went down to the ford and waiting there killed three deer, which had come to drink. The next morning at the same place he killed two deer. When visitors arrived and there was no meat in the house he would take his rifle and range through the woods until he found a deer, hang it up where it was shot and skin down the hind quarters and cut it off there with his hunting knife and carry it home on his back leaving the remainder of the deer to the scavengers of the forest. On one occasion a deer which had been chased by men and dogs jumped the fence into the yard while Raleigh was absent from home and in some way entangled its antlers in the fence and on account of its exhausted conditions -- perhaps wounded -- was held. Emily Kemper Mayes seized an ax and with the assistance of a negro woman, one of her slaves, killed it and dressed it. Wild turkeys were found in large droves all through the woods and no attention was paid to them until larger game began to fail and shot guns came in to supplant the earlier rifles.

Raleigh's first house, like all pioneer homes of the times, was built of roughly hewn logs with clay floor, clap-board roof, the cracks between the logs being "chinked" with chips and clay. It was heated by a great fireplace which consumed large quantities of wood with little effect, most of the heat going up the chimney. Practically all the furniture was homemade. Having no tubs or jars in which to store the first lard he made, he cut down a hollow tree and made a trough in which he stored the lard.

Practically all the clothing was of home manufacture. Skins were sent to the tan yard and then manufactured into rough shoes by local cobblers, sometime by the slaves. Wool was carded, spun and woven into cloth after which it was fashioned into garments by the women of the family -- even the beds and blankets being made in this manner. All clothing both of men and women hung from the shoulder and none was suspended from the waist.

Food was plentiful but of little variety, and consisted largely of wild meat. There was no "fed" meat, even the hogs being raised on mast and allowed to range the woods until meat was needed. All food was cooked in the fire place either in pots hanging from a crane or in pans or ovens placed on the coals. Corn bread was served on week days and biscuit on Sundays only as wheat was scarce and the grinding a difficult and expensive operation. There were few vegetables and such as there were were small and ill flavored. There was no method of preserving fruits except by burying in the ground or drying. Until cane was planted the only sugar obtainable was maple sugar, and every farmer maintained his sugar camp where it was regularly made for the family use every spring. Later on cane sugar in the form of loaf sugar came into use but as it sold for $1.25 a pound the price was prohibitive. Nuts were carefully gathered every fall as a valuable addition to the winter menu.

The use of whiskey was universal. Only homemade whiskey was to be obtained and it sold for from 12½ cents to 25¢ per gallon and was found on every table. Tobacco was the principal crop. Ten acres of corn or wheat was considered an unusually large acreage. Wheat was sown, broadcast, harvested with a reap hook, threshed out with a flail over a pen of rails and carried on horseback to Clarksville where it was sold three bushels for a dollar or 33 1/3¢ a bushel. As there were few commodities which the pioneer could sell money was scarce, and its purchasing power was great. Although taxes were small it was a hard struggle for the poorer people to get sufficient money to pay them, and as late as 1840 a debt of $2.00 was a burden. Raleigh Mayes was Constable of Hurricane Township, at that time a place of importance as it constituted the executive officer of the law in what was then frontier country. The fees of the office gave him some ready money, and his trips to the county seat at Troy and his duties as Constable gave him the opportunity to buy land sold for taxes. As a result he acquired a number of tracts of land which he farmed with his slaves. Slaves were the dividing line between the aristocracy and the plebian of the times. But slave labor was slow and unintelligent. They were more of a luxury than a necessity and in latter days were principally valuable about the house. Their only real advantage was in clearing the land of the dense growths of timber, and in that way they contributed to Raleigh's prosperity, making land profitable which otherwise would not have produced taxes. He owned over thirty slaves at the opening of the Civil War, men, women and children, and in the tax lists of 1850 is named as one of the largest slave holders in the county. (History of Lincoln County (1888), page 320). He was President of the first Board of Education of Lost Creek School, now the Elsberry School District, #16, at that time including all of Township 51, Range 2 and 3 East, and established in 1837. (History of Lincoln County 1888, page 462.) He was active in the organization, and was a Director on the first Board of Directors of the "Agricultural and Mechanical Society" which initiated the present Lincoln County Fair. The Board was organized in 1855, and the first Fair was held, October 1, 1856. (History of Lincoln County 1888, page 328). (Atlas of Lincoln County, 1879, page 12). In the course of time Raleigh became an important factor in his community and accumulated considerable property holdings. He gave each of his children at marriage a farm of 200 acres and stock and equipment to operate it. He and his wife are buried in the small family burying ground, which at that time was directly upon the New Hope-Falmouth road, a short distance from his house, but which through change of the road to the present highway is now isolated.

His father stretched a tent on the crest of the hill just east of the Bluff Road and directly across from the site of the Watts Cemetery on the present Forest Keeling Nursery, on reaching Missouri until he could build a house. The grandfather of Seneca Watts was John Watts, born January 26, 1736, died September 25, 1823, married to Lucy Watts, born December 15, 1761. The family of his father, William Watts, consisted of:

- a-Eliza Watts, born Sep 13, 1801, married Francis Marion Lockett. (See VII-43 supra), died Jun 12, 1879.

Seneca Watts enjoyed the respect and affection of all who knew him, and was a man of wide influence. He was a favorite with his father-in-law, Martin Kemper, who made him executor of his will, and when another son-in-law, Raleigh Mayes, unwittingly displeased the old gentleman by selling a slave woman given his wife Emily by her father, he made Seneca trustee for the share of Emily in his estate. This estate amounting to a little over one hundred dollars for each child of Emily was paid each of the children in gold by Uncle Seneca on the day of their marriage. He lived to an advanced age, a fine type of the old Virginia gentleman. He and his wife are buried in the Hamilton Cemetery, on his old farm, now known as the Taylor Place.
